THE SUPPRESSED SPEECHES

One significant fact cannot be overlooked in the amnesty debate. It may be borne in mind by the public, that the concession of the floor cannot be a Democratic favor from the order that it would be unsafe to afford a chance for the expression of the real sentiments of the ex-Confederates in the House. To prevent this Randall sought to pass his bill through under the gag of the previous question, and it would have been foiled by Mr. Blaine's determination to have a free debate. Lastly, on his motion, leave was given that all who permission was granted by Speaker Randall, to be one of the most experienced and judicious of the ex-rebel members to reply, but the permission was qualified by send to one that it should abstain from any change in the ship of the Lost Cause, or other attempts calculated to alarm the loyal people. The firebrand could not restrain his temper, however, and Mr. Blaine's remarks of his speech were so wild and revolutionary as to arrest even his Democratic Northern supporters, except those who shipped for every [illegible] of the proposition.

Still, even so, following Hill's lead, from and there was a still last effort, exercised, connivance of the party leaders, which precedes is well to lay upon the premature disclosure of the clover foot, and it was decided that the rest of the ex-Confederates should be stopped and [illegible] Speaker's book, for some hours, the amnesty question to be excluded, imposition of Jeff Davis, ex-rebel officer, Postmaster General of the Confederacy, and project of a [illegible] assessment of the cotton of the [illegible] Packer, Jewell, and others, were put off to obtain the floor by force of access and [illegible] of the [illegible] officers of the U. S. Army and Navy, involved in a [illegible] of papers. Hill, the one of Southern [illegible] fully expected to carry, will be clear evidence of his [illegible] North, and [illegible] presidential campaign.

But the whole scheme was easily blocked by Randall and his [illegible] amount of [illegible] Ben Hill was [illegible] and judicious of the South [illegible] the [illegible] chair of [illegible] affords and [illegible] others, will have [illegible] Mr. Blaine [illegible] the thanks of the country for preventing the [illegible] of hypocrisy [illegible] the National canvass [illegible] fastening upon [illegible] of the unconstructed rebel [illegible] the element of the Democratic party [illegible] people to see the breaker [illegible] Ship of State has been permitted to drift [illegible] forever [illegible].

FROM GARDINER

A Drunken Idiot.

(TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

GARDINER, Jan 18 This afternoon Wm Pottle of South Pittston well filled with rum drove his team into the open water near South Gardiner Where Haley & Co were engaged in cutting and storing ice The horse swam across the open space a distance of five rods, struck the opposite ice and turned back before men could run around the square to his assistance He swam back to the place where he went in and was helped out, bringing with him his driver master who had sense enough to hang to the reins. This is the second time Pottle has met with a similar mishap

Mr.

"SAY, BOYS, DO YOU HEAR THAT YELL."

BY ROBERT ROLAND.

The Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, who has also been one of Arms in the Confederate Senate, has dismissed his ex-Union soldiers, who are doubtless much poorer than the Messrs Assistant Doorkeepers, and hired instead ex-Confederate soldiers in their stead.—Pub. Reporter.

Say, boys, do you hear that Confederate yell,
Rising up from the winter's air?
You have heard it on Shiloh's bloody plain,
In the days of our dark despair,
You have heard it in sixty-one and two,
And in sixty three and four;
But when the weary war was through,
Dismissed we ever to hear it more!

Say, boys, do you hear that Confederate yell
Ringing up from the capital's hall?
And remember they strove to rear in hell,
Or rather the Capitol's walls?
Do you think, for a moment, the northern trail
Where their legions in triumph tread,
Will be turned back by your iron hail
From the consecrated area of God?

Oh, say, do you hear that same old yell,
From the battle-field ringing out,
That was heard in days remembered so well
On the plains of Virginia and Georgia?
Do you relish its exulting, defiant tone?
Is it what you thought for? Say,
Is it what you fought for, when Mars and Bellona
Have called you to action today?

Say, boys, do you hear the yell of the crew
Who have fought for six dreary years,
And whose feet in blood, all the wilderness through,
Believing in God and the right?
Do you hold on crutches? live on a crumb,
Or in the country go begging?
Or have you no voices? and are all tongues dumb,
That ye love the Confederate's slave?

There, we have trod on the northern hills,
We have marched on the southern plain
With the iron arm of the man who wills
The lightnings of life behind;
And is this the glory that ye longed to see,
And conquered in sixty five?
Is this the harvest ye gathered in
When you gave to the nation alive?

Say, have heroes of southern soil,
In vain that ye fought?
Look not the nerves paralyzed that toiled
Was your valor thus sold for naught?
Are the thousands who stood on Fort Wagner hill,
Or fell in the Dismal Swamp,
Unnerving the hands of clans to shoot
For your Arcadian tramp?

O God! Brave boys, do you hear that yell
From the Capitol's walls well forth?
Was it more defiant when numbers fell
On the storm, in the North?
And have ye so soon forgotten the battle line,
No voices of the preceding
When the vanquished in vast array turned round,
Who hold on their?
